Sunbonnet Sue No Longer Pencil-Shy; She Handles Farm Financial Problems

By
GRACE McILRATH ELLIS
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

United States census reports are expected to confirm agricultural authorities' statements that thousands of rural women have replaced their husbands as active farm business managers. In increasing numbers these women are handling economic and financial problems of the farm. The following article is illustrative of women's new place in the farm life of the nation.

WHEN I was growing up on the farm our most interesting neighbors were the Fosters. Pa Foster had six daughters, a fascinating black money pouch, which pulled up with thongs like a knitting bag, and the weight of the family financial enterprise on his own thin shoulders.

The Foster women picked peaches, made tubs of butter, even lent a hand on occasions with the field work. But when there was a decision to be made involving money, they ran to Pa. He either whipped out the old money pouch. Or didn't.

When Pa died, Mrs. Foster beat a dazed path from bank to courthouse to my father's door, completely enveloped in that fog of gloom properly associated with widows of her day. Until old friends sighed and courthouse clerks ducked behind bars at her coming.

Molly Has the Money Pouch. Today a son, John, farms the old Foster place. If the money pouch still exists John has long since given it to his wife, Molly. Molly is the clerical half of the farming partnership. In a downstairs den she keeps books, checks bank statements—does secretarial work for the business.

Pride in their work is written on the faces of these Four-H club winners in a food preparation contest. In addition to teaching home economics, Four-H clubs are teaching girls like this how to keep books, study markets and assume financial management of the farm. The girls are, left to right, Maxine Koons, Fairmont, Minn.; Orr-Lyda J. Brown, Eugene, Ore.; Catherine Barnes, Moultrie, Fla.; and Betty Freeman, Pikeville, Tenn.

Who knows what the month's cream checks total and when the next Land Bank payment comes due?—Molly! Who dials in radio market reports and relays significant ups and downs out to the feed lots?—Molly! Who mails insurance payments, writes monthly rural electric co-operative checks—does for the family enterprise, in fact, what a paid secretary would do for the boss of a comparable urban business—plus shouldering partnership share in farm decisions?—Sun-bonnet, taffy-haired Molly.

Molly Part of Modern Movement.

And there's nothing startling, farm leaders say, about the Foster arrangement. It's duplicated in upwards of 100,000 homes the country over. Molly's no ambitious domestic with her eye on the family financial pants. She's part of a movement.

For a year now I have been delving into the movement's history, parrying questions with leaders and poking through piles of reports. And I'm amazed at the extent to which the country woman of today—particularly the young country wife—is up to her neck in business.

Neither genius nor wishful thinking catapulted her into the new position. She's been trained for it. The economic avalanche of '29 uncovered her responsibility. Numerous agencies have stepped in to help her meet it.

The most astonishing piece of work has been done by the Home Management divisions of the various state extension departments. Some 150,000 rural women have flocked to the courses in business and economic education offered during the last

10 years by three-fourths of the states to rural homemakers' study groups. (Michigan had 4,240 women enrolled last year; Iowa expects to reach 15,000 in '39.)

Business Legalities Draw Interest.

Exact procedures vary considerably, but practically all states cover three phases: "Making the Family Money Plan" (including practice in accounting), "Economic Facts Which Affect Farm Women" and "Business and Legal Procedures a Farm Woman Should Know." Some states offer study, too, in taxation and government.

Work in accounting is based on the need for correlating records and decisions of both farm and home. Effectiveness is indicated by the fact that in '38 and '39, 121 heretofore pencil-shy housewives rigged up business corners and started assuming some secretarial duties for the farm-home enterprise.

But it's the dive into business legalities which really brings sparkle to wifely eyes. Women love it! Women everywhere—in Georgia, in Maine, in Kansas, and Louisiana. They love knowing how a contract is made—a check—wills, deeds, mortgages, abstracts. They like the practice given in reading and signing legal papers.

Credit Works Two Ways.

Of the 200,000 4-H girls who were wrinkling foreheads over personal expense accounts back in '30 and '32 an amazing number are cropping up among today's outstanding keepers of husbands' farm records and books.

In 14 states an estimated 50,000 women have since '36 taken advantage of work in the legal phases of credit and loan supplied through the Family Credit division of the Farm Security administration. Sound credit, the women are taught, is credit that is "good" for both borrower and lender. A justifiable mortgage is one based on no less than 12 months of actual farm records. And "the farm woman, unlike the city woman, is so important a factor in her husband's business success that an appraiser's first rule is 'get acquainted with the wife.'"

Outstanding example of the let's-tackle-this-together spirit which ripens in such communities is the Benton county, Iowa, "Recent-Wed" group.

To Jimmy Green, agricultural agent, in one of the Cedar Valley counties, had come news of a young farm friend "cleaned out." Jimmy knew secretly because of solo responsibility—an inadequate wife. Problems of young farm operators are similar. Would the young couples in his district enjoy getting together now and then to pool problems, shoot questions at bankers, landlords, management experts. He planned such a meeting, invited in all couples in the county under 35, expected 50, got 400.

'Hopeful Sign of Age.'

Benton county "Recent-Wed" meetings are now the amazement of community elders, "the most exciting and hopeful gatherings I've ever attended," a visiting banker told me. It's not the subjects discussed—"What'll we spend our money for?" "How can we get adequate credit?" "How about landlord-tenant relationship?" nor the experts attracted, but the way the women take part in the thing, partnership style, without self-consciousness on either side—just as though their grandmothers had been doing it. It's a thrill—one of the hopeful signs of the age.

"I used to think family discussions about money were bad-stuff," John Foster told me recently. (He and Molly are Benton county products, leaders in the "Recent-Wed" group.) "But when you do it co-operatively and base it on facts—they're interesting as the dickens. Farming looks to me like the biggest co-operative on earth—family co-operative. Soon as the children can hold pennies we're taking them into it. But it's the little woman," he grinned, "who has a natural born knack for handling the money end of it."

Trade figures of the past few years give Great Britain first place in Iceland's import-export books. Denmark ranked second as a source of supply, and German business, expanding rapidly, captured third place. Last year the United States ranked fourth as an Iceland customer. Purchases of cod liver oil boosted United States purchases.

Iceland has no illiteracy, no jails, no army, no navy, no air force and no national debt. Iceland has a balanced budget, rich fishing and fish-production industry, and six sheep to every Icelander.

Doris Monte, Michigan Four-H club girl, knows how to raise sheep—and she knows, too, how to market them. The study of markets and marketing conditions is one phase of new farm activities for rural women.

Independent Iceland Places Confidence in Premier's Rule

ICELAND'S recent decision to place complete governmental control in the hands of Premier Hermann Jonasson and his cabinet has served to focus world attention on that small nation which has had no foreign war in more than a thousand years.

The 120,000 people of Iceland have never wanted a monarchy, and were not satisfied with the dual role played by His Majesty Christian X, king of Denmark, who also served as king of Iceland. When Denmark was taken by Germany, Iceland's Althing (World's oldest parliament) voted not to depose their king, but that "having regard for the fact that the situation now created makes it impossible for His Majesty the King of Iceland to execute the royal power," it shall be vested "until further notice" in Icelandic Premier Hermann Jonasson and his cabinet.

Premier Jonasson is Iceland's strongest figure. In addition to being president of the council of Iceland, he is also minister of justice and of agriculture. In 1929 Jonasson was chief of police of Reykjavik, nation's capital, where more than a quarter of the total population is concentrated.

In 1934 he was elected to the Althing, and that same year became premier.

Jonasson has been termed "Iceland's musketeer." As strong physically as he is politically, for many years he kept winning the Icelandic wrestling championship in Norse games handed down through the centuries from the Vikings.

Icelanders are proud of their nation's history. Since its settlement in the Ninth century, Iceland, for the most part, has had a representative form of government. The Althing was established in 930, more than 800 years before the infant United States declared its independence. This assembly, comprised largely of fisherfolk and farmers, has been in continuous existence ever since, with the exception of a "blackout" between 1800 and 1843.

Though ties of blood, culture and economic life have been linked closely to Europe in the past, Iceland has turned more and more toward the West. Shortly before the German invasion of Denmark, the island obtained a $1,000,000 credit loan from the United States for the purchase of wheat, stock feed, rye and gasoline.

Table-Cloth Penmen Prove Business Is Picking Up

CHICAGO.—Take it from A. A. McVittie, National Restaurant association head, business is better.

McVittie doesn't prove it in this instance, although he says he could, by citing surveys of sales gains in his own industry.

The answer, he says, is the increasing trend among restaurant patrons of the male species to write on table cloths.

An Indian, in Washington, offers to bet that the Republicans will beat Roosevelt . . . Spread of war is seen in Allies' efforts to buy long-range bombers in the United States.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—An Indiana Republican, who has retired from politics and has been practicing law in Washington for some years, paid an extended visit to his native state. He has just returned, and his conversations are amazing some of his friends.

It so happens that among his friends is Sen. Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, and much of his conversation was directed at persuading the senator not to accept the vice presidential Democratic ticket unless Wheeler could be sure that Franklin D. Roosevelt would head the ticket.

The Hoosier offered to bet anybody three to one that the Republicans will defeat any Democrat except Roosevelt in November. He goes further and offers to bet even money that they can beat Roosevelt.

It should be admitted at this point that the Indiana man in question is a very enthusiastic Republican. On the other hand, he is eminently practical, and his judgment is very cold. For example, personal egotism and blind partisan optimism were so lacking in him a few years ago that, when he saw the Democratic tidal wave coming, he did not run for re-election.

THE INDIANA INFLUENCE

But he still retains all his interest, and so on his visit back home he went up and down the state inquiring into trends.

His conviction as a result of this trip is that Indiana is going Republican this fall. His offers to bet about the presidential election are based, of course, largely on his findings in Indiana.

There is a conviction on the part of some people who do not live in Indiana, and were not born there, that Hoosiers are inclined to exaggerate the political importance of their state, especially the notion that "as goes Indiana so goes the nation."

But the word from Indiana, together with the bitter factional war of the Democrats in Illinois, and the Republican trends manifested in Ohio and Pennsylvania, indicate that this presidential battle will be a horse race.

EXPECT SPREAD OF WAR?

Here's one to try on your atlas—or globe—with a ruler or tape measure.

The allies right now are dickering for release of Uncle Sam's "flying fortress" bombers. They intimate they might buy 50 or 60 of them. The point is, of course, for what?

Up to now our experts had thought this particular type of plane would be useful only in the Western hemisphere. The so-called medium bombers are able to take off with a full load of bombs, fly from 700 to 800 miles to an objective, drop their bombs, and return with a fair margin of safety as to fuel supply.

The so-called "flying fortress" is able to extend this radius from 800 miles to more than 1,500. But—except for this tremendous increase in range they have no advantage whatever. For the shorter ranges the not so huge bombers are infinitely superior in speed. Two of them would carry just as much of an explosive load as the "flying fortress," and the two would not only cost much less than the one big fellow, but would be able, as a result of their greater speed, to have a much better chance both of achieving their objective and of returning safely.

BOMBERS COMPARED

The speed of the "medium" bomber is in excess of 350 miles an hour, while that of the "flying fortress" is only about 200 miles an hour. Obviously, in the element of a surprise attack, the faster bombers would be much more likely to get through to their objective before defense, either of anti-aircraft guns at the moment of attack, or of fighting planes to meet them en route, could be brought into successful action.

Then there is the question of getting home safely. Obviously again the "flying fortress" would have to have a considerable start en route home to be safe from pursuing fighting planes. Whereas the "medium" bomber would have to have very little start indeed to prevent its being overtaken by fighting planes.

Nor is there any possibility that any of these angles of superiority by the smaller bombers has been overlooked by the foreign experts. They know all about the subject. In fact, they come pretty close to knowing all the answers. Realizing this, our experts have been scratching their heads as to why the allies want the big ones.

IN THIS column we have shown how to make useful, attractive things out of everything most from spools to tin cans, but several readers have reminded me lately that I have neglected orange crates. Here is a pair of tables to match a smart new bed-spread.

The bed is an old iron one that has been cut down and then padded and covered with the gingham (detailed directions are in Book 3). CHAPTER XV—Continued

"I don't get your point. What do you reckon to find out?" asked Stoddart.

"Time," said Moses. "Gulbaz times it like a jockey. He's the best judge of pace in all India. He times it to the minute. If he isn't ready, then he'll play for time."

The truck halted in front of a house whose red front door was bolted, barred, and scrawled in chalk with infamous remarks anent the virtue of its inmates. There was an alley, a yard wide, pitch dark at the farther end. Into that alley yellow light streamed through a door that was partly ajar. There was a faint staccato drumbeat, a twang of stringed music, the sickly wail of a flute, and a stench in which sensuous perfume fought with the reek of garbage. Moses spoke to the truck driver, and the truck driver sounded the horn—three times, then three more, then once.

The dissolute and dirty looking person in the big white turban, to whom Moses gave a captured knife in the bazaar, appeared suddenly, apparently from nowhere.

"What's that bloke up to? Where did he come from?" Stoddart demanded.

"If you'd looked under the truck you'd know," said Moses. "He ain't respectable, so he don't ride first class like me and you."

Moses whispered to the man, who walked down the alley and entered the door.

"Is this your harem? Aren't we going in?" asked Stoddart.

"No. You'd break the ladies' hearts. We'll wait here and give 'em a chance. This is Gulbaz' temporary field headquarters. I've sent him a message. He'll come or he won't. If he don't, we'll know the answer."

"What did you tell that bloke to say to him?"

"I said that Sergeant Stoddart's here with information that he'll sell for a price and wants a personal interview, face to face, no go-betweens."

"You've got your nerve," said Stoddart. "It'll be all over the bloody bazaar that I'm telling secrets. Why don't you use your own name?"

"We've hooked him. Here he comes," said Moses. "Keep your hair on now and sit tight. Say nothing, and leave it to me."

Through the door, down the alley and straight to the truck, without glancing aside, without a moment's hesitation, came a man of medium height and middle weight, who walked like a young god, though he was middle-aged. He was dressed in a tight-fitting turban, white singlet and loin-cloth and a striped silk semi-European jacket. He came to the tail of the truck, gave one glance at Stoddart and stared straight at Moses. His smile changed, outwardly only a little, but something happened at the corners of his lips. It had changed to a fighting smile, merciless, malicious.

"You're a dog," he remarked in plain English.

"Fancy you giving away secrets," Moses answered. "I'm here to sell 'em for cash on the nose. Me and this Sergeant know something. It's hot. We're splitting fifty-fifty. How much?"

"I will listen. You may tell your secret."

"Cash on the nose," said Moses. "Money down or nothing doing."

Gulbaz' smile changed again. It conveyed a suggestion of vanity beyond the utmost reach of ordinary mortals. He glanced at Stoddart then back at Moses.

"Are you satisfied?" he asked. "You have recognized me? You can truly report that you have seen me in Kadur? You saw the door I came from? Very well, you may watch me return. After that, you may go to the devil."

"I'm staying here until my messenger comes out into the street alive," said Moses.

"I will send him to you," Gulbaz answered. "He is lucky. Luckier than you are. Wait and see."

Gulbaz strode back down the alley and entered the door. A moment later the messenger came out, looking scared, as if he felt murder behind him. He ran and crawled in under the truck. Moses spoke to the driver. The truck started, forward, because the street was too narrow to turn around in.

"Where now?" asked Stoddart.

"Back to camp," said Moses.

"Well, you drew blank that time. If you feel as foolish as you look you'll think twice before you call me a fathead again. You've spent a rupee eight annas for nothing, and you're not a cent the wiser."

"Plus having learned that you're stupider than any other blasted Britisher I ever met," said Moses. "I've learned all I came for. Gulbaz isn't as smart as he thinks. In some ways he's near as stupid as you, all along of his pride."

"Oh, that's easy to say but it's just talk," said Stoddart. "If you ask me, you're a liar. You haven't learned anything. To the extent that a white man can condescend to a half breed without losing caste, we've been fair to middling friends, you and I. But if you use my name again promiscuously like that, I'll knock your block off."

"Fathead," said Moses. "He knows me. He doesn't know you. He came out because he was curious."

"And he told you to go to the devil. That's all you learned."

"Fathead! You mean that's all you learned. I learned that he's ready. He's red-hot ready."

"Ready for what?"

"To get Norwood. He's trigger-ready. If he weren't, he'd be playing for time, and we'd be arguing this minute about the price of what we'll tell him if he'll pay."

"You mean he'd have bribed us?"

"I do not. Gulbaz makes promises. And he sometimes keeps his promises, unless."

"Unless what?"

"Unless someone else can keep 'em for him with a long knife. He can hire that done for five rupees a head. So why pay us a thousand? Can your intellect answer that conundrum? Figure it out on a board when you get home."

CHAPTER XVI

The Maharanee was scrupulously fair. Rather than disguise her motive, she revealed it. She stripped objections to it naked. She didn't pretend that Rundhia was a prince of virtue or a man of his word, except when it suited him, or when compelled to keep a promise. The

The Maharanee believed every word she said.

Maharane believed every word she said. But she used arguments that sounded curious, even to Lynn, who was under the spell of the eastern environment.

Lynn later found Rundhia standing in moonlight, in a golden turban and European dinner clothes. As a palace door closed behind Lynn, she, too, stepped into the moonlight, with her face half veiled under the sequined sari. It was she who looked oriental, dressed according to the Maharane's wishes. Rundhia looked like a western athlete, in more or less fancy dress. And he called Lynn a goddess in western terms that any polo-playing American gallant might have used: "You look like Miss India! You almost give me religion! Pull away that curtain! Show your golden hair, and let's give all the other goddesses a sight to make them green with envy!"

Lynn uncovered her head and walked beside him in silence.

"I feel like a god tonight," said Rundhia.

"Have you been drinking?" Lynn asked.

"You golden-haired iconoclast! Your arrow aimed into the heart of my ballooning self-esteem! You delicious archer! I have had five cocktails. Do I seem drunk?"

"What sized cocktails?"

"Measured to my mood, exactly."

"Then you seem astonishingly sober. What have you done about Captain Norwood?"

"Lynn, let's forget Norwood. I want to talk to you."

"I can't forget him. You and I have wronged him."

"Has he answered your letter?" Rundhia retorted.

"No. But have you forgotten your promise?"

"Didn't the Maharane tell you? Don't trouble yourself about Norwood. Forget him. Talk to me."

"I wish to talk about Captain Norwood."

"He has talked about you. I don't mind telling you. According to one of the palace servants, he told your aunt this afternoon that he's disgusted with you."

"I can believe he is disgusted," Lynn answered. "But I can't imagine him saying so to Auntie, or to anyone else."

"Let us talk about you," said Rundhia.

"Very well, what about me?"

"Now you have made me speechless!"

"Have I? Then perhaps you will listen to me."

"Beloved, I will gladly listen to you, in an ecstasy of patience and devotion, during years which shall flow so fast that we'll be old before we know it!"

"Did you get that from a book?"

"I never read books. When I talk to you, my tongue can only stutter miserably hints of how I feel. You make me delirious. Be good enough to notice that these arms resist impulse!" He extended his arms toward the moon, then dropped them to his sides. "Oh, Lynn, I love you."

"Good job I don't love you," she answered. "There'd be—"

"A new golden age in Kadur!" Rundhia interrupted. "Lynn: philosophy, religion, economics and the other muck they made me listen to at school and college left me, until you came, dry of faith in anything but evil—and even evil dying! You are my first glimpse of goodness."

"Don't you love the Maharane?"

"Isn't she good?"

"Oh, yes. She is good past history. Lynn, you are the present and the future! One straight look into your blue eyes, and I knew what hope means and the higher vision. I had never seen it, until I saw you."

"Sounds good," Lynn answered. "What was in the cocktails?"

"Don't joke! Lynn, I'm in love. I mean every word I'm saying to you."

"I mean what I say, too," Lynn answered. "I don't love you—What was that noise? In the distance. It sounded like shooting."

"I didn't hear it," said Rundhia. They had reached the steps that led to the kiosk on the garden wall. It was dark in the wall's shadow. He was justified in offering his arm to guide her up the steps, but he put it around her. She could feel his vibrance. She escaped him—ran up the steps ahead of him, then, waiting on the wall in full moonlight, facing him, unafraid.

"There! Did you hear that? Wasn't that a rifle-shot, Rundhia?"

"Might have been," he answered. "Not so easy to tell."

"Isn't Captain Norwood's camp in that direction?" Lynn asked.

"Somewhere over there, yes. Possibly a jackall or a stray dog scared his sentries. Never mind Norwood. Lynn, you say you don't love me. I don't believe you."

"Why not? I told you the plain truth—Do you think sentries would fire at a dog?"

"His would! He's crazy. Lynn, I don't believe you because you forgave what I did in the treasure room. And because when you hurt me, you were sorry. Also because you are not afraid to be alone with me now. Lynn, you don't know yourself. You're—"

"Do you know yourself?" she retorted. "Don't you think it strange that they should be shooting at night?"

"No. Most soldiers live in a continual state of false alarm. Lynn, listen to me. Don't I excite you?"

"You did. But I saw you, and I heard you laugh at Captain Norwood's ruin."

"You dislike me?"

"Oh, no."

"You admit I can stir your emotions?"

"Oh, yes. I admit that. Why tell lies about it? You're magnetic. I almost fell in love with you."

"Lynn, you are thinking about East and West. That hoary old superstition! It lingers, they tell me, in America more tenaciously than anywhere else, though even schoolbooks nowadays admit that we and you are of the same race. Do you know how many western women have become the wives of Indian princes?"

"I don't want to know. I don't care."

"You are right, Lynn. Quite right. Why should you care? It is love, not what others have done, that crumbles superstitions. Lynn, I love you. I wouldn't lie to you—"

"Have you done your best for Captain Norwood? Have you really done it? What have you done?"

"Never mind. I have done it."

"You swear?"

"Yes."

"Then I will listen. You were saying—"

Rundhia had to recover the train of his thought. He turned away from her a moment, paced the wall, and came back:

"Lynn, my love for you may sound selfish. I always have been selfish, until I met you. I have no practice with words that a genuine lover should use. But I am genuine. For the first time in my life, I am unselfish. May I tell you—will you listen if I tell you—what my heart tells me?"

"Yes, I will listen, Rundhia."

"Will you really listen?"

"Yes, Rundhia. I would rather listen to almost anything than my own thought, at the moment."

"You are feeling deserted?"

"Despised!" Lynn answered. "If Captain Norwood had answered my letter—"

"You are lonely! So am I lonely! Lynn, diwaza kola hai! The door is open! Enter. It is that short step across the threshold that makes you hesitate. Leap!"

"You mean into your arms?"

"Yes."

"No."

"Come, Lynn!"

"No."

"Lynn, you make me hate myself. Am I so unappealing to you—"

Suddenly he changed his voice. He sounded angry: "Are you in love with Norwood?"

"I hardly know him. How could I be? I only know that I never felt dirty before in all my life. I don't like it, Rundhia. And I can't forgive you for having crowded over Captain Norwood's disgrace. You and I brought it on him."

"Lynn, is that all that's the matter? If I give you my word of honor that I have solved the Norwood problem, will you listen to me?"

"Have you solved it?"

"If I prove to you, before midnight, that there is no longer any problem about Norwood, will you come into my arms?"

"Speak plainly, Rundhia."

"I will. Lynn, face it! Norwood has no use for you. Has he answered your letter? He has not! The messenger reported that he tore up your letter without reading it. I don't know why you care a damn what happens to him. He doesn't care what happens to you. Your aunt doesn't care. She is leaving you flat."

Lynn interrupted: "You say Captain Norwood tore up my letter? Why didn't you tell me that before?"

"To save your feelings. However, you know now. That's how he feels. That's Norwood. Lynn, you are merely hesitating on that damned old superstitious crumbling platform of 'East is East and West is West,' that Kipling lied about. You and I are above all that nonsense. Lynn, beloved, come into my arms now! You are lonely. So am I lonely. See, I am waiting for you. Come here, Lynn. Come of your own will. Be mine. Face things from the inside looking outward. You shall be my wife, and I swear by my love for you, that Norwood—"

"Oh, that's only a promise," Lynn interrupted. "I won't believe you about Captain Norwood, until you prove it."

Psychologist Discusses Effect of Meat on Energy

Is the jungle lion ferocious because it lives on raw meat? Would it be more gentle if a vegetarian? And are men who live principally on a meat diet likely to be more belligerent than those who prefer vegetables?

The answers to those questions, according to Martin F. Fritz, associate professor of psychology at Iowa State college, is yes and no. Lack of meat in the diet may cause an animal or human being to live on a lower energy plane, Fritz found, thus giving the appearance of a peaceful, mild disposition.

"According to that hypothesis," he said, "a vegetarian diet simply depresses the activity level while a generous intake of meat may bring out the full energy potentialities."

"It might be argued that the continued eating of high protein foods, such as meat, might result in a permanently higher plane of basal metabolism which would account for the energy and vigor of meat-eating nations," he continued.

But Fritz apparently found a hitch in this argument. For if it were true, he said, the Eskimos could be expected to be especially violent "for they eat a meat diet and their basic metabolism is about 33 per cent higher than that of people living in temperate zones."

The Eskimos, however, are the most peaceful and unwarlike race in the world, the professor declared. Inheritance is an important factor in the degree of activity, he said. But, "it may be argued that all races have inherited a potentially high level of activity—a very questionable assumption—and that the differences we observe are due to the failure to utilize a diet which will bring out this activity to its fullest extent."

Fritz summarized by saying: "It is quite possible that diet does influence racial temperament, but until further evidence is gathered we may well be just a bit cautious in drawing conclusions."

Modest Applicant Was Not a Bit Superstitious

The smiling, confident young man stepped up to the bank manager's desk.

"Good day, sir," he said. "Have you any need for a highly intelligent and trained man just out of college?"

"Well," said the manager, "what kind of a position are you seeking?"

"I want something in the executive line," replied the young man. "Say a vice presidency."

"I'm really sorry," said the manager sarcastically, "but we have twelve vice presidents."

"Oh, that's all right," came the eager response. "I'm not afraid of thirteen."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Adam and Fallen Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 12.

The Golden Text was, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit" (John 3:6).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made" (John 1:1-3).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Man reflects God; mankind represents the Adamic race, and is a human, not a divine, creation. In the Gospel of John, it is declared that all things were made through the Word of God, and without Him (the logos, or word) was not anything made that was made." Everything good or worthy, God made. Whatever is valueless or baneful, He did not make,—hence its unreality. In the Science of Genesis we read that He saw everything which He had made, and, behold, it was very good" (p. 525).

Camp of Royal Neighbors attended the Royal Neighbors meeting of Tinley Park Camp Tuesday evening. A fine program was given in honor of Mothers. Bingo was played and lovely refreshments were served. Miss Audrey Neithammer and Miss Dolores Cooper appeared in a recital given by Mrs. Hauser for her dramatic pupils in the Farragut public school in Joliet under the auspices of the P-T. A., last Friday evening. There were 60 pupils who took part. Audrey was "Miss Dainty" and Dolores was in a play representing one of the "Three White Mice." They each did very fine. Beside the parents of these children from Mokena, Mrs. Emil Cappel, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Semmler and Rev. A. Lindgren attended. Chas. Schmuhl of Joliet was a visitor in Mokena Tuesday.

"Buddy Poppy" is the name chosen by the men themselves. Each flower carries a copyrighted green label which guarantees to the public that these poppies were fashioned by the hands of disabled veterans. The entire proceeds of the sale are devoted to welfare and relief work for ex-service men and their families, including an allotment to our National Home for widows and orphans of ex-service men. "The White House has annually endorsed the sale of poppies as conducted by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. It is also endorsed by the General Federation of Women's Clubs and by state federations; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; fraternal organizations, religious leaders, and business and professional associations. Wear a Buddy Poppy Memorial Day.

Honoring the Dead To Help the Living

"To honor the dead by helping the living" expresses the purpose of the nineteenth annual V. F. W. Buddy Poppy distribution, to be held Saturday, May 25th. Poets and song writers have made the poppy an inseparable memory in connection with tributes to the nation's dead. When the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S., back in 1922, introduced to America poppies made in France, the public immediately gave recognition to the ideals that these poppies symbolized. The demand for additional poppies the following year became so great it was necessary to have them produced in this country.

MEMORIAL DAY

Mrs. Rose Moriarty, Mrs. Rose Bechstein and Mrs. L. R. Thiel attended the annual May Festival held at the National Teacher's College in Evanston Friday evening. Miss Grace Moriarty took part in the program.

Miss Ada Reilly of Joliet spent several days with the Misses Adeline and Ada Semmler, this week.

Mrs. Fred Hentsch and niece, Pearl Werner, attended a Mother and Daughter banquet in St. Steven's Lutheran Church in Chicago last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Bartel who left last Friday on a business and pleasure trip to Cincinnati and Mammoth Cave and other places of interest, have returned home.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars met Thursday evening and made plans for Memorial Day.

Mr. John Martin, who underwent a mastoid operation in St. Joseph hospital last week returned home Tuesday evening. He is improving nicely.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all friends who were so kind to us in every way, during our recent bereavement, in the loss of our beloved husband and father. To all who sent beautiful floral offerings; and use of their autos.

Hollywood Stunt Man Drops Stunts in '500'

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Cliff Bergere, ace Hollywood stunt artist, leaves his tricks at home when he comes to drive each year in the 500-mile race at Indianapolis.

Third place money-winner in 1939 on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, he has driven 4,745 competitive miles in 500-mile races to build up the reputation of being one of the most consistent racers in the business. He has finished in the money seven times.

Bergere goes through strenuous training in road work and gym sessions in preparing for the big race. And his movie stunt work, crashing automobiles, making hazardous jumps from burning buildings and other stunts helps keep him in tip-top condition.

Race experts figure Bergere as a good bet to be well up there when the "500" is run on May 30th. Finishing a race appears to be one of Bergere's best stunts.

Garden Dept. of Woman's Club Active

Among the eighteen departments of work in the Third District, there are many which find leisure during the summer months. Quite the reverse is true of the Garden Department, according to the newly appointed chairman, Mrs. John A. Kotal, 5540 Whipple street, long time member of the Englewood club and active in its Garden Department. Immediately after the General Federation convention, which is meeting at Milwaukee, Wis., May 20th-25th, Mrs. Kotal will call a meeting of all her garden chairmen to make plans for summer and autumn flower shows.

The Press and Publicity Department, likewise, knows no season and attempts to keep all club women acquainted with club activities during the entire year. This department, during the 1940-41 season will be under the supervision of Mrs. E. Edward Pfeiffer, 236 Webb street, Calumet City, a member of the Calumet City Women's club.

The Press room at the Hotel Sherman during the recently held state convention was crowded at all times and much interest was shown in the prize winning scrap books. These books are compiled by the various press chairmen of the local clubs and awards are made in different groups, the division being made on the basis of the number of members. There were entries in five senior groups and two junior groups, from Third District. The awards were as follows:

In Group C, clubs of 350 to 400 members, first place went to Mrs. B. I. Meyers, Morgan Park Woman's club, second to Mrs. George Jones, Englewood Woman's club, third, Mrs. W. E. Baker, Hamilton Park Woman's club. In group D, clubs from 200 to 350 members, only one award was made, first place going to Mrs. D. T. McClure, Chicago Heights Woman's club. In Group E, clubs from 100 to 200 members, first place went to Mrs. A. C. Stevenson, Chicago Lawn Woman's club, second, Mrs. E. B. Babel, Brainerd Woman's club, and third, Mrs. Herbert Funk, Blue Island Woman's club. Group F, comprising clubs from 50 to 100 members, awarded first place to Mrs. George Larson, Calumet City Woman's club, second, Mrs. Kate Windsor, Clearing Woman's club, and third, Mrs. Clair Magee, Neighborhood Club. Group G is composed of all clubs with less than 50 members. In this division, first place went to Mrs. Raymond Kelly, West Lawn Woman's club, second, Mrs. Russell O'Hara, Gresham Woman's club, and third, Miss Adele Schmadeke, Orland Park Woman's club. In the junior grouping, Class B included clubs whose membership is from 50 to 100. First in this division was won by Mrs. C. F. Rath, Englewood Junior Woman's club, second by Miss Ruth Schultz, Blue Island Junior Woman's club, and third by Mrs. Glen Allen, Chicago Lawn Junior Woman's club. In Group C, junior clubs with less than 50 members, first award was given Miss Margaret Behling, Calumet City Junior woman's club, second, to Mrs. N. Vincent, Homewood Junior Woman's club, and third to Miss Betty Curtis, Morgan Park Woman's club.

Two interesting tours are in prospect for Third District members during the month of May. The Tulip Trail, a tour of Chicago parks, will be made by bus on May 28, starting at 1 o'clock p.m. from the Art Institute. This tour will include visits to Jackson Park, Garfield Park, Humboldt Park, Lincoln Park and the Shakespeare Gardens at Northwestern University. This trip is being sponsored by the Garden Department and reservations are being taken by Mrs. Beatrice Harms, 1401 S. Keeler avenue. These reservations must be made by May 22nd. The tour under the auspices of the State Department of Conservation, May 27th, 28th and 29th, will also attract many club women from the Third District. This trip will include Chain-o'-Lakes, White Pines, Mississippi Palisades, Black Hawk and Starved Rock. Bus transportation will be available but members may also accompany this trip in their own cars is desired. Reservations for this delightful trip may be made with Mrs. George Ward, Palos Park, who is completing her fourth successful year as Conservation Chairman for the Third District.

Rex Mays to Pinch Hit For Retired Lou Meyer

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The old master of the Speedway has picked an apt student of speed as his "successor."

Louis Meyer, triple winner of the 500-mile race in 1928, 1933 and 1936, is all through as an active competitor on the roaring road.

But he has named Rex Mays, colorful "Glendale Ghost" of California, to drive his high-powered race car in the big race May 30th on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Mays, while a fast qualifier since 1934 and a pace setter in several races since then, has never finished the 500 miles. This year he is accorded his best chance, for Lou Meyer will pass on to the 27-year-old star all of his sage advice on winning the "500," together with the fastest car on the track last year.

The Mays-Meyer combination will be a tough one to beat.

Son of Famous Driver Shines at Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—You can't keep a good son down! Bill DeVore, son of hard-driving Earl DeVore, who finished second in the 500-mile race at Indianapolis in 1927, has returned again to the famous Hoosier racing oval to prove that statement on May 30.

Earl DeVore perished when the S. S. Vestris sank at sea in 1928. He had taught Bill the rudiments of race driving, and Bill's idol always has been his father. Bill saw his dad compete against DePalma, DePaolo, Lockhart and other driving wizards. "They were all great," he says, "but anytime my dad was out there with them they had a race."

Young DeVore has finished "in the money" for the past three consecutive years at Indianapolis. He started in 33rd position in 1939, and finished in the tenth spot. "My car was wrecked in practice and we had to sweat to get in the race at all," he explained. "I'm going to win yet—just for dad."

ORLAND PARK

During the registration period preceding the last primary election many voters in Orland township failed to register and consequently could not vote in the primary. The village board held their semi-monthly meeting on Monday evening. Among the matters under discussion was the proposed subdividing of 4 lots in the Colum subdivision. These lots being located on 143rd st. west of Ravinia ave. A subdivision project it is expected will be completed this summer.

The final meeting of the school year of the Orland Park P.T.A. was held Thursday evening last week. During the week of May 20-25, the Orland Park Public Library will be open the following hours: Monday, May 20, 1:00-5:00; Tuesday, May 21, 1:00-9:00; Wednesday, May 22, 1:00-6:00; Thursday, May 23, 1:00-9:00; Friday, May 24, 1:00-6:00; Saturday, May 25, 1:00-6:00.

The committee which is supporting the library locally is composed of the following members: Roy Loebe, Mrs. Stewart M. Loebe, Mrs. Leila W. Pomeroy, Mrs. J. W. Lindquest, Mrs. Ella Loebe, Mrs. H. S. Racing Millionaire to Drive at Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Joe Thorne, the racing millionaire of the "500," believes in driving with his foot and not with his pocket-book.
Thorne has finished twice in the money at Indianapolis, taking ninth place in the 1938 race and finishing seventh in 1939. Thorne also owned and entered the car with which Jimmy Snyder drove into second place and smashed several race records, as well as the marks for one lap and 10 miles in the qualifying rounds.
Besides his own mount, the lanky sportsman will have at least two other cars in the Race May 30th. It's estimated that Thorne has invested half a million dollars building race cars, and is rapidly creeping up on the mark of Cliff Durant, millionaire sportsman of years ago who spent a cool million trying to win the "500."

Air Corps Training Makes Successful Airline Pilots

Captain "Bill" Fry Says Army Air Corps Training Is as Fine as Any Available

By O. L. PARKS,
Pres. Parks Air College

Gayest, happiest city in the world—that's what William J. "Bill" Fry calls New Orleans, when people from his native Virginia are not around. Bill, who flies the Chicago-New Orleans run for Chicago and Southern Air Lines, looks forward to his days off to turtle soup and pompano at Antoine's and the Oysters Rockefeller that you can get at so many places in the Vieux Carriere.
To a World War veteran of Army aviation Bill owes his present enviable position as a captain with the air line. He ran into the officer when he was a student at the University of Richmond in his native state of Virginia.

The officer painted a bright picture of aviation, the Army training and the future, either in the service or in air transportation, that was beginning to blossom. The picture was so bright that Bill threw his books out of the window and left for Army Air Corps training at San Antonio, Texas.

But down in Texas he had to pick up other books for ground school classes in addition to his flight instruction. He kept up a smart pace and in a year he had his wings, his commission, and was off for a flight to new horizons.

Since then he has occasionally wished he had finished the course at the University and taken a degree before beginning the Army training. But, as a young Virginian, he was impulsive and knew that he had found the career he was intended for.

Between flights to Chicago and tours of New Orleans' beautiful and charming old French quarter, Bill took time out to say a word or two of appreciation for the Army training.

"In my opinion the training given in the Air Corps is as fine as any training available in this country," he declared. "In view of the present-day requirements for flight personnel I strongly recommend a young man complete at least four years of college work, majoring in aviation subjects or aeronautical engineering and then, with the training given by the Army Air Corps, a career at the 'top' is assured."

After his own graduation from the Army school of instruction, Bill went down among the Georgia peaches for his active duty. He still has pleasant memories of Atlanta and is looking forward to seeing its historical scenes pictured in the epic "Gone With The Wind."

From Atlanta Bill went to American Airlines (at that time, American Airways), immediately obtained a position as co-pilot. Later he was promoted to pilot, a post he also held with Western Air Express. In 1934 he joined Chicago and Southern as first officer and was quickly promoted to captain in the same year.

The Secretary of the Army Training Center at San Antonio will be glad to "ad" information about the program and make possible Bill's successful career, available to young men 20 to 26 years of age who have had two years or more of college education.

Will Your Home Be Modern Tomorrow, Too?

Make Sure...

for tomorrow beckons with new and improved electric home conveniences

Proper wiring is one of the most important features of a modern home, and yet it is often easily overlooked when plans for building, remodeling, or modernizing are discussed. With wiring for the most part out of sight behind walls and under floors, by far the greater percentage of homes of today have wiring facilities that are totally inadequate to meet the ever-increasing uses of electricity.

Each passing year sees an ever wider acceptance of such well-known electric aids as air-conditioning, modern lighting, refrigeration, and numerous small electric home appliances. If you are building, remodeling, or modernizing your home, make your plans include adequate wiring for both present and for future needs. Perhaps your present budget may not permit the inclusion of all the electric aids you hope to have some day, but by allowing in advance for such future contributions to better living, you can make substantial savings later. And you'll also find proper wiring saves from day to day by delivering all the electric power you pay for...wasting none. Look ahead...Plan ahead...Live ahead! Get in touch with your neighborhood Electric Wiring Contractor and let him show you how easy and economical it is to install adequate wiring in your home. Ask him for full particulars!

...AND ELECTRICITY IS CHEAP!

"Lift-All"

HOW "LIFT-ALL" WORKS

IN THE NEW "LIFT-ALL," we are introducing the first all-purpose hydraulic power lift. Read these interesting quick facts about "Lift-All."

"Lift-All" lifts or lowers the entire implement at the flick of a finger on the handy control. But that is not all—"Lift-All" goes way beyond that! It enables you to: (1) Lift or lower front beams of cultivator first. Delayed action automatically actuates rear beams when they reach point where front beams were lifted or lowered. (2) Lift either side of the implement independently of the other side. (3) Lift and hold implement to any desired working depth.

See this great new attachment for Farmall-H and Farmall-M. Ask us for a demonstration. And remember, "Lift-All" is an exclusive Farmall feature!

SOMETHING NEW AND DIFFERENT
(See Recipes Below)

New Recipes for Your File

"Something old and something new" is just as important in menus as it is in a bride's costume.

It's a good idea, when you plan to experiment with something entirely new, to include in that meal one dish you know the family is really keen about. For instance, if the dessert is something very new and different, be sure that the main dish of your meal is one that's familiar and well-liked.

And, it's an excellent idea, when most of a meal is composed of family favorites, to include one new dish for a touch of variety. It may be a cut of meat that you haven't used before, prepared in an unusual manner; or perhaps it will be a vegetable that's new and strange to you; or it might be just an out-of-the-ordinary conserve or relish to supplement last summer's supply, which, by this time is probably running very low.

You'll find, here, an assortment of recipes for foods that are unusual and delicious. There's a new way of preparing shoulder of beef—in one of those easy casserole dishes you like to serve, where you don't want to spend too much time in the kitchen; serve the Baked Shoulder Steak with baked or scalloped potatoes, buttered green beans and rhubarb pie, and watch your family beam!

"Pork chop treat" served with a crisp, chilled salad of lettuce, apples, and dates, needs only a beverage, bread and a favorite dessert to make a completely satisfying meal; and if you want to please the man of the family in any kind of weather, serve "pork chops delicious" with cheese biscuits, a simple green salad, lemon meringue pie and coffee.

Pork Chops Delicious.

(Serves 4)

- 5 pork chops (rib or loin)
- 2 medium size onions
- ½ cup rice (uncooked)
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup hot water
- 1 cup tomato puree
- 1 green pepper (minced)
- 1 clove garlic (grated)

Brown chops and on each chop place one slice of onion, then a tablespoon of rice (uncooked). Season with salt and pepper. Add water, cover and steam for ½ hour. Then top with tomato puree, mixed with the green pepper and garlic. Return to steamer and cook until rice is tender (about 30 minutes longer).

Baked Shoulder Steak With Apricots and Mushrooms.

(Serves 6)

- 1½ inch slice shoulder of beef (about 4 pounds)
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ½ teaspoon curry powder
- ½ cup tomato pulp
- 1 small 4-oz. can button mushrooms, or
- ½ pound fresh mushrooms, cut in quarters
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 12 halves canned apricots, (about half of a No. 2½ can)

Wipe meat with damp cloth and sprinkle with mixture of flour, salt and curry powder. Brown one side in a well-greased frying pan and place brown side up in a 2-quart glass casserole. Sift remaining flour mixture over the top of the meat. Spread the top of the meat with tomato pulp. Cover the dish. Bake in a moderate oven, allowing about 30 minutes to each pound. Slightly brown mushrooms in butter over low heat. Place on top of roast when it is removed from the oven. Garnish with canned apricots and serve from the baking dish, which keeps the meat hot throughout the meal.

Cherry Roll.

- Biscuit dough (2 cups flour recipe)
- 1 No. 2 can cherries
- ¼ cup light brown sugar
- ½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon lemon rind (grated)

Roll baking powder biscuit dough ½ inch thick. Drain cherries. Cover dough with cherries and sprinkle with brown sugar and cinnamon. Roll like a jelly roll and place in buttered loaf baking pan. Bake approximately 30 minutes in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees). Baste with cherry juice while baking. Serve with whipped cream or with hard sauce.

Pork Chop Treat.

Place seasoned pork chops, 1 inch thick, at one end of a large roasting pan. In the center, place a mound of good bread dressing seasoned with sage or poultry seasoning. At the other end put thinly sliced potatoes and thinly sliced onions, seasoned with salt and pepper. Dot with butter. Bake for 15 minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees) and then reduce heat to a moderate oven (350 degrees) and bake about 45 minutes longer.

Rhubarb Conserve.

(Makes 12 glasses)

- 1½ quarts rhubarb (diced)
- 8 cups sugar
- ½ cup seeded raisins
- ½ cup cold water
- ¾ cup orange juice
- ¾ cup orange rind (ground)
- 1 cup pecans (cut fine)

Place rhubarb, sugar, raisins, water and orange juice in kettle. Remove white membrane from the orange peel, and put peel through the food chopper, using the fine blade. Add to conserve, and bring mixture to a boil. Boil gently for 20 minutes. Add nut meats and cook 5 minutes longer. Pour into sterilized glasses and seal.

Lemon Meringue Pie.

- 1 cup sugar
- ¼ cup cornstarch
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¾ cup cold water
- ¾ cup boiling water
- 3 egg yolks
- 1 tablespoon butter
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon lemon rind (grated)

Combine sugar, cornstarch and salt. Add cold water; stir until smooth. Add boiling water and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is clear and thick. Cook 3 minutes longer. Beat egg yolks; stir cooked mixture into them. Add remaining ingredients, return to flame and cook 1 minute. Pour immediately into baked pie shell. Top with meringue.

Meringue.

- 3 egg whites
 - 6 tablespoons sugar
 - ½ teaspoon salt
- Beat egg whites partially; then add sugar slowly, beating until mixture is stiff. Bake in slow oven, (300 degrees) for 18 minutes.

Simple Goiter May Turn Into Serious Type

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

I WAS once examining a heavyweight wrestler and noted that both eyes were "bulging." I was surprised to see his excellent muscular development and examination showed a slow pulse. I told him I expected to find a rapid heart beat despite his development as I expected goiter. "Oh," he said, "I had that goiter cut out a couple of years ago. I was thin and nervous. I've put on 40 pounds since the operation."

I have spoken before also of a physician whose heart rate dropped from 110 to 72 after removal of a goiter and he lost much of his nervousness, excitability and talkativeness.

Perhaps you know an individual who had a goiter—lump in front of his neck—when he was 15 years old and 20 or 30 years after still has it, and, apparently, has no symptoms. This is because goiters are not all alike; some are innocent or harmless and some must be removed by surgery or X-rays to preserve life.

Dr. Barton

The simple or innocent type of goiter usually develops between the ages of 12 and 17, at the period of greatest physical development. The only sign or symptom present is the growth or enlargement of the gland; there is no change in the structure or working process of the body. However, at middle age this type may develop into the more serious type.

Dr. E. M. Eberts, Montreal General hospital, who, with his associates investigated and treated 4,000 cases says, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal:

"We do not know positively what starts the dangerous (poison) stage but careful inquiry brings out, in many instances, a history of infection, especially from tonsillitis and influenza immediately preceding the onset of the dangerous form of goiter."

This dangerous type very often occurs where there has never before been any appearance of goiter. The individual is of middle age, more frequently a woman (5 to 1).

History of Allergy Case Is Necessary

ALLERGY—sensitiveness to various substances—has become a common word in our language, but frankly, when we think of allergy, most of us have in mind hay fever due to pollen of ragweed, or perhaps hives—urticaria—due to eating strawberries or other foods.

"But what about the other cases of allergy with obscure headaches, with peculiar abdominal symptoms evidently of considerable severity but unexplained by usual examination? What about peculiar skin rashes, dark spots, inflamed spots and the eczemas for which there is no apparent explanation?"

I am quoting from the Boston number of the Medical Clinics of North America, Clinic of Dr. Francis K. Rackemann, Massachusetts General hospital.

While there is, perhaps, no direct method by which the question of whether allergy is or is not causing the symptoms, a good deal can be done by getting a complete history of the case. Among the points to be considered are:

Symptoms Explained.

First, the symptoms must be explained by a pathology, or damage, due to muscular contraction, stimulation of glands, or by the tiny blood vessels allowing too much liquid to pass through their walls and form the hives or the swelling of eyes, lips or other parts which is an outstanding symptom of allergy.

Second, the evidence of allergy is not usually just one symptom because patient has usually more than one. "An abdominal pain becomes easier to understand when a few hives appear."

Third, members of the family, either the parents or the children, may have allergy; and then finally with allergy goes the finding of positive skin tests and the finding of an increase in the number of certain cells in the blood.

LESSON TEXT—Jeremiah 23:21-32.
GOLDEN TEXT—Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.—I Thessalonians 5:21.

Tickling the vanity and pleasing the ears of ungodly people with words of flattery and false comfort, giving them the assurance of peace and prosperity in the very pursuit of their sin, did not begin with the false prophets of the twentieth century. Six hundred years before Christ, Jeremiah the prophet had to contend with such false teachers.

His manner of dealing with them is of great interest to us, for essentially the false prophets of that day used the same methods and had the same false message that characterize their descendants of today, the so-called modernistic religious liberals who are busy everywhere attempting to undermine the faith of God's children in His Word. They are revealed as being destitute of divine authority, without a real message, and under the disfavor and subject to the judgment of God. They are

I. Without Divine Commission (vv. 21-22).

"I have not sent these prophets"—that should have been sufficient for the people of Judah. A man who is not sent by God has no word from heaven, no help for needy humanity. He is worse than an admittedly secular teacher or philosopher, for he claims to speak with divine authority and yet has only the disappointing impotence of a liar and a fraud.

The reason Judah listened to them was because they so eloquently hushed the condemning voice of their own consciences, assuring them that all was well, when, as a matter of fact, everything was wrong. Men listen to the same kind of teaching today for the very same reason.

II. Without a Divine Message (vv. 23-29).

These false prophets may delude men, but they have not fooled God. He is not a finite being, limited to this earth (v. 23). He looks on men from the far off viewpoint of heaven and judges by His own high and holy standards.

Nor can they hide from Him (v. 24). God hears the word spoken in the academic shelter of a college classroom, secretly poisoning the young person's heart against the faith of his father and mother. A day of judgment also awaits those who in their public utterances use the phraseology of orthodoxy, while in private they undermine and destroy Christian faith.

If a man is foolish enough to suppose that the dreamings of his own mind and heart will help anyone, let him be honest enough to call them just that; namely, dreams (vv. 25-28). But God will assuredly not hold those men guiltless who try to pass off their own philosophies as bearing the approval of God; who would have people honor their assemblies as Christian churches, when they are at best only social or intellectual gatherings designed to magnify man rather than Christ.

Note in verse 29 that the Word of God is like the fire that consumes and purifies, and also like the hammer, that breaks up the rocky heart of man.

III. Without Divine Favor and Blessing (vv. 30-32).

God is against every false prophet. Small wonder that there is the savour of death in their speaking and their works. There is no divine power in their message and no holy dynamic to enable people to respond to their admonitions. Prominent modernists are decrying in our day the fact that their cultured essays and polished philosophies are not reaching the hearts of men and are failing to transform lives. At the same time, humble preachers and teachers of God's Word, sometimes in hidden and remote places, are rejoicing as they see the transforming grace of God come upon lives as a result of their simple proclamation of the gospel of grace. Keep on, brethren; God is with you.

Observe what God calls the false prophets—thieves (v. 30) and liars (v. 32). Hard words, but they come from One who is all-knowing, who judges rightly and in love.

Like the Shadow

I am gone like the shadow when it declineth; I am tossed up and down as the locust. My knees are weak through fasting; my flesh faileth of fatness; I became also a reproach unto them; when they looked upon me they shook their heads.—Psalm 109:23-25.

It Doth Not Yet Appear

You are not what you ought to be, and you are not what you can be. You may rise yet, and fight a good fight yet, and be a good man more, after the likeness of God who made you, and Christ who died for you!—Charles Kingsley.

Lowly Penguin Is a Peace-Loving Bird

We all know that penguins can't fly, but few people are aware that baby penguins, who can swim almost as soon as they are born, take pebbles with them as ballast. If penguins are disturbed they will promptly desert their nesting grounds. A few years ago this was proved when fishermen at Marcus island, off the southwest coast of Africa, caught penguins and used them as bait. The surviving birds left the island and have never returned, so the profitable trade in penguin eggs and guano was finished on Marcus. On Dassen, another island near by, more than half a million eggs and enormous quantities of guano are collected every season.

Nation needs more vitamins and minerals—says U.S. Department of Agriculture

See how you're helped by delicious oranges!

Hardly one family in two now gets enough vitamins and minerals to permit radiant good health. So enjoy oranges liberally—daily! Just peel and eat them for healthful refreshment. Or keep ready a big pitcher of fresh orangeade.

An 8-ounce glass of fresh orange juice gives you all the vitamin C you normally need each day—and one-third of the vitamin B₁. It also supplies vitamins A and G, and the minerals calcium, phosphorus and iron.

YOU CAN TELL CAMEL CIGARETTES ARE SLOWER-BURNING. THEY'RE Milder AND COOLER

THAT SLOWER WAY OF BURNING MEANS EXTRA SMOKING, TOO. CAMELS ARE THE BEST BUY

SCIENTIFIC tests have confirmed it, but you can tell just by smoking Camels that they are slower-burning. You'll find Camels free from the excess heat and irritating qualities of too-fast burning...extra mild and extra cool. You'll find a full, rich flavor that only Camel's matchless blend and slower way of burning can give. And on top of the extra pleasure, you'll find Camels also give extra smoking (see right).

In recent laboratory tests, CAMELS burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Brass fixtures will not tarnish if given a thin coat of lacquer.

A rubber band, wrapped several times around a stubborn screw-top jar lid, provides a non-skid grip.

Prevent accidents when you are doing cleaning work on a step-ladder. Nail a piece of emery to each step and you cannot slip.

To remove cream stains from garments or linens rub the stained area with cold water and soap and then rinse it thoroughly in cold water.

Do not keep dates in the refrigerator. Leave them in the package and keep them on the pantry shelf or in the kitchen cabinet until ready for use.

Keep plenty of cleaning tissue in the bathroom. It will save much wear and tear on the towels—especially when the men folks learn to use it for wiping off razors and the women for removing lipstick.

A tablespoon or two of tomato soup in gravies give them delicious flavor. Or you might simmer slices of cold roast beef in a can of condensed tomato soup or pour it over a pot roast in the last hour of cooking.

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!

When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is: get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't endure it first and "cure" it afterward. Find out what's giving you the trouble.
Chances are it's simple if you eat the super-refined foods most people do: meat, white bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.
If this is your trouble, you should eat a natural "bulk" producing food—such as one as the crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran. Eat it often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.
